* Photoshop enables you to duplicate, clone, and merge different layers; adjust layers and attributes; and change blend modes, levels, curves, and other image modifications. * Photoshop has many functions that enable you to perform multiple tasks at once. You start by loading a digital photo into Photoshop and selecting a graphics style from the Style Library. LAYER-BASED DATA Layers are the basic building block of your Photoshop image. Each layer has a unique name and attributes that determine the effects that each layer will create. Layers can be arranged anywhere on the image. When you want to edit an area of an image, first create a layer with the specific editing style. Then, position that layer where you want to make your changes, and begin editing. LAYER BASICS Photoshop Layers Each layer in Photoshop has its own attributes, which can be adjusted to change the way the layer functions or work, even if other changes have been made to the image. Each layer in a Photoshop document has a color, called its fill color, and can have a range of attributes applied that show the way the layer is being used. Each layer can have its own fill color, gradient, clipping mask, mask, and opacity. This gives you more control over each layer than you would have in a traditional print, or any other software program. * **Layer** is the name of your document. * **Layer Attributes** includes all the details for how your layers will work. These include Transparency, Paths, Clipping, Opacity, and Mix or Multiply. * **Layer Styles** are the settings for how your layers will be positioned and how they will be organized and edited. * **Layer Blend Modes** specify the way layers blend. * **Layer Comps** are a control for how you want to organize and edit layers. * **Layer Colors** are a color palette for blending effects and colors. Layers are important tools for working with any photo. You can use layers to select only part of an image for a specific edit, like cropping an image. You can create a pattern, mask, or change the color and appearance of a layer. You can even colorize an image or create a high- or low-contrast look with layers. Q: Ordered comprehension with list comprehension in python I'm wondering if it's possible to write ordered comprehension in python with list comprehension. I know it can be done by writing the comprehension multiple times as: [x for x in lst if x.lower()] but I'm wondering if it's possible with a single list comprehension, like this: [x for x in lst if lower(x) in 'opk' for lower in lower_opcs] It would work, as I would define the variable inside the list comprehension, but it would be of no use. A: This isn't the list comprehension you're looking for: [x for lower in lower_opcs for x in lst if lower(x)]

Enhanced physiological state of illicit drug users. This is a study on the hematological and biochemical profiles of illicit drug users. Drug users were classified as dependent and nondependent on the basis of ICD-9 criteria of drug dependence of the WHO. Blood samples were collected between 15 to 24 hours after intake of illicit drugs. Total leukocyte count (TLC) was increased in both the groups. The absolute and relative lymphocyte count was significantly lowered in both the groups. Relative lymphocyte count was higher in nondependent drug users. The hematological parameters were also different at various stages of drug use. The hematological profile of illicit drug users is altered in the absence of clinical manifestations.

Q: If a user has a phone number, can they be locked out? I use DeviceAuth on my app and I want the user to be locked out if they access it with an incorrect password. I know it is possible to call disable users in a bunch of ways, but does this mean that a valid user could get locked out? A: Yes, you can lock all or some users out by disabling them with DeviceAuth (and you can also re-enable a previously locked user by re-enabling them, so nothing is "locked out"). If this is an iOS device the way to do that (re-enable) is to use a iOS Enterprise Certificate on that device, since this is how you enroll devices. If this is the API you are using then I would also suggest making sure that any users that you attempt to re-enroll are not currently logged in on the device so that they are not re-enrolled in the presence of a valid device administrator.
