What's new:

what they're doing. I want feedback! I've spent the last few days fiddling with the Home Dashboard and the Outcome Dashboard to see what they do. If you've forgotten, the Home Dashboard is how you show who's online. The Outcome Dashboard is a new one, and can be used to display information that can be read by everyone. Because I've used it to display progress on a key population health project, I'm interested in feedback from other people if it's useful for them. They've recently improved the Home Dashboard so it displays a list of who's online by gender, age, or by time of day. This means you can quickly assess the most at-risk people in the room and send messages to them that are tailored to the time of day, with whom they often interact, or by gender. You can even indicate who's missing by using conditional logic (or we wouldn't have them online at the most appropriate times). Highlight individuals who are missing for the desired times of day, or use conditional logic to indicate who's missing in certain categories: The Outcome Dashboard has some new features as well. It has response buttons and a Graph builder. It also has four perspectives that look at the data in different ways. We call these "boxes" in which you can decide which data to display in. Below are links to all of these as well as a description of how to modify the dashboard on a personal Google Home account. (1) I call the section called "The Latest Self Knowledge" "The Latest" because it's where you update the data. This is where you decide which data to get first, and how often to get it. (I've left the interface there because you might want to change this as well). Highlighting peers who are missing for the desired times of day or using conditional logic so missing can be indicated: Just play the video and try the Home Dashboard out yourself. If you look at your Dashboard for the first time, you'll notice it starts off with the person who is missing. You can play with the Home Dashboard by answering a single question with "Home Dashboard". You can even hear each person responding by name as they answer. This is generally useful

A TALE OF TWO WORLDS: One world is comfortably staid, accepted as the norm. The other world is a stark, post-apocalyptic world where tensions flare as more than a century of societal balance collapses. THE VILLAGERS: A group of people are smuggled from a village to New York by a group of mysterious gunrunners. Once there, they find out that the fate of the world, not to mention their own survival, is in the hands of the gunrunners. HOW MANY: The shooting game Heavy Bullets. HOW TO PLAY: A story-driven first-person shooter with RPG elements, Heavy Bullets unfolds in a world that you travel through alone on a quest to change the world. Be the hero of an unusual story that combines science fiction, horror and comic elements. You can now enjoy the FULL video below. Two weeks ago, I picked up the Steam version of Heavy Bullets for $4.99. I have to admit, I was a bit skeptical. I'm not much of a FPS player, and normally only play games like DOTA and Counter-Strike. Today, I sit here and tell you about my first impressions of Heavy Bullets. I'm not exactly the target audience of Heavy Bullets, but I figured I can tell you the pros and cons of this game, and how I think it performs. So, after playing Heavy Bullets, tell us what you think about the game in the comments below. Pros: - Beautiful, colorful, and unique game - Story is unique and very interesting - It's best-selling on Steam - Includes Demo and Full Version - The developer is very responsive on Steam Cons: - Some graphics could be better - Difficulty levels seem inconsistent Ok, now for the review. So, what is Heavy Bullets? It's a first-person shooter with RPG elements. You travel through five different "worlds", and collect "bullets" that you can attach to guns to help you in your quest. You can "level-up" by collecting different types of bullets, and improve your character as well. Each world has different characters, and we'll talk about them later on. Another unique feature, is that you can carry and use multiple
