pdf download Murex SerosaDec 18, 2018 at 16:47 // News Coin Idol Author Cointelegraph turned to the research service "EUREKA" that revealed in the recent survey findings that the North Korean government has a keen interest in blockchain technology, but the state authorities have not yet adopted any measures to disseminate the use of cryptocurrency among the public. According to a researcher of this study, the West would like to establish a dialogue with the government of North Korea. Indeed, since the North Korean government has no interest in cryptocurrency, there is no need to create infrastructure for the circulation of digital money. However, the researcher said: "The West hopes that by opening a channel to the people of North Korea, the government will change its perception of cryptocurrency and blockchain to find more long-lasting ways to deal with the issue of illegal financial flows and adopt a less closed policy." Also, there are countries in Europe and South America that have failed to even examine the potential of the use of digital assets in the real economy, so the probability of their adoption is practically zero. The researchers believe that without such a dialogue, there is no prospect of any use of cryptocurrency in North Korea because the North Korean authorities do not agree on the advantages of digital money. This is why: "The authorities have not taken measures to achieve the goal of activating the cryptocurrency, despite the potential of the technology and the large economic sanctions against the country. In fact, it is the most vulnerable sector that uses cryptocurrency, and people do not agree on the potential of this technology. The experts agree that cryptocurrencies are the currency of the future," - said a researcher of the study. According to the study, cryptocurrency enthusiasts think that it may turn the tide and open up new opportunities for North Korea, as the use of blockchain and cryptocurrency has the potential to solve many problems in the country. However, it turns out that cryptocurrencies are considered a product of the West, and North Korea does not have any restrictions or connections with the Western world, and there is no real demand for these currencies in the market. Xeroderma pigmentosum (XP) is a hereditary cancer-prone disease caused by the XPA gene mutation. XPA gene encodes a nuclear protein which is important for DNA repair. The recently discovered human RING finger protein 124 (HRP124) is a potential partner of XPA protein. We used a yeast two-hybrid method to analyze the interaction between HRP124 and XPA protein.
