The combination of bile acids and microbiota clearly has profound effects on the intestinal epithelium. Upon bile acid deconjugation by gut bacteria, UDCA readily diffuses across the epithelial cells. Conjugated bile acids on the other hand, have to first be deconjugated by bacterial bile salt hydrolases. These reactions are poorly understood, although it has been shown that several types of bile acid hydrolases are present in the colonic mucosa and microbiota, including one with the activity to cleave taurine conjugates of bile acids (58). A recent in vitro study showed that LCA binds to the intestinal brush border membrane vesicles (BBMVs) and is internalized by human colonic epithelial cells (45). Co-incubation of LCA with BBMVs, but not taurochenodeoxycholate (TCDCA), inhibited LCA uptake into the cells, supporting the presence of a specific transporter for LCA in the BBMVs. After internalization, the BBMVs stimulated the uptake of anions, thereby causing a membrane hyperpolarization similar to that induced by binding of D-glucose (45).

Download xbox 4 for windows 8.1 akadel>> do you think you can get an MDPI file from the publisher? akadel>> I ask because I think it wouldn't hurt to have both in the same physical document linux> there's no such thing as an MDPI for IEEE journals. mendeley is a publisher and the author has to upload that. linux> you'd need to find an article in mendeley and get a pdf of that.
