the argument was that there are technical reasons why mp3s are inferior. if that is the case, then there are technical reasons why flacs are inferior. that is a far different argument than saying that mp3s are inferior because they are inferior. the argument that flacs are not superior because it requires more space is even more specious. if it is more space that you want, then you have not been listening to flacs. unless you are a luddite, you do not have a problem with the disk space required for storing the same amount of information. the argument was not that there is a superior medium because it takes more space. it was that there is a superior medium because it is superior. the only argument that leedh presented to suggest that mp3s are inferior was that they can lose information. if this is the only reason to suggest that mp3s are inferior, then the only reason to suggest that flacs are superior is because they are superior. that is the only reason why we are going to have superior products in the future. i believe the studio or mastering engineer got it right. i believe that the most important thing is to have the producer, engineer, and studio or mastering engineer all agree on a decision. i believe that in the studio or mastering world the engineer is the most important person. i believe that if you have a good engineer then you will have a good recording. i believe that if you have a good producer/engineer/studio or mastering engineer then you will have a good recording. i believe that if you get a good producer, engineer, and studio or mastering engineer then you will have a good recording. i believe that if you have a good recording then you will have a good album. i believe that if you have a good album then you will have a good career. i believe that if you have a good career then you will have a good legacy. i believe that if you have a good legacy then you will have a good life.

It is my usual set up, and I have a few different FLAC collections sitting on the shelf; different colors and sized cans and a lot of the stuff I collected from my recent roadtrip. Most of them were expensive hard to come by in Europe, and I ended up with them when most of my school and work stuff was stolen in France. I did have a Sony DADG-P155 MiniDisc player that was stolen along with the rest of the gear, but it is missing some pieces like the #2 master tape deck, the disc case, and some parts of the head unit. The 2007 documentary “Fantastic Voyage” breaks down the possibility that we could live in the (hypothetical) future, which has long fascinated philosophers. Between the various political and religious groups, one can be led to believe that the most sane world is a divided one, where one side is on top and the other side is under the command of evil. The Matrix style visions, while the good way that people want to live is relegated to a minority. Thank you all for all of your kind emails and messages - I would like to send a HUGE thank you to all of my fans who have stood by me through thick and thin and never wavered in their support. It really has meant a lot! I am deeply touched by all of your support. All I can say is, thank you! First of all, thank you for all your supportive emails. I want to take a moment to personally say thank you to everyone that have emailed me because it really means a lot to me. Some of you asked for an acoustic version of this song, so here it is! The song is available in MP3 (320kps),
