The term "quality bonds" is used herein as known in the art and in commerce to mean a useful bond, or bond which can be used, such as where a glass core has been first bonded in a glass capsule and then fused in a fusion chamber. The term "quality bonds" encompasses both "heat-strengthened glass" bonds and "ABA" bonds as generally know in the art. The most common type of such quality bonds are based on a previously well-known process of making such bonds. As described in the commonly assigned U.S. Pat. No. 3,649,116, such a quality bond process is carried out by incorporating in the core of a colored glass capsule a metal compound of a metal selected from the group consisting of Ag, Al, Ca, Co, Cs, Fe, Hg, Li, Mg, Mn, Na, Ni, Pd, Pt, Sb, Se, Ta, Te, Ti, U, V, W, and Zn, which metal compound is reactive with a metallic compound of the metal 79a2804d6b
